

Andreas Hüttemann

Inductive Metaphysics and Scientific Practice

I will briefly introduce the late 19th century movement of „Inductive Metaphysics“ and show how my own project of a minimal metaphysics for scientific practice relates to it.

More particularly I will argue that abstract features of scientific practice concerning such as features of our explanatory practice provide the best evidence we have for have metaphysical claims about general features of reality.